The recovery of wolves in the Great Lakes is a conservation success story. Wolves are always a controversial issue however, and conservation organizations hold a variety of viewpoints for and against wolf hunting.

Wisconsin's Green Fire brings special expertise to this issue with our members who are career wolf biologists with long experience. Wisconsin needs an updated Wolf Conservation Plan and the state has important work to do to update biological and social information on wolves before holding a hunt. Our WGF testimony to the Natural Resources Board lays out important reasons not to rush into a wolf hunt this season.

Registration for testimony on the January 22nd meeting must be received by 8 am January 21st. Information on how to testify, submit written comments, or participate in the virtual hearing is available at <https://dnr.wisconsin.gov/About/NRB/2021/22-January>.
